NOTICE.

THE Undersigned call the attention of Masters and Agents of vessels discharging at this port to the great advantage to be gained in point of convenience, despatch, and economy, by hauling one of their Wharves at Kow Harbour.

With the assistance of steam cranes, a general cargo can be discharged easily in a few days—or in about one-fifth of the time usually occupied discharging in the roads.

There are large, dry, and very commodious brick godowns on the wharves, which vessels have free use of for cargo while discharging.

The trouble and disputes with, and pilferings of cargo common among boatmen, are avoided by vessels using the wharves.

Carriage of cargo to the town (which is within easy distance) is guaranteed to be not more than lighterage from the roads, and the coolie hire discharging alongside is less.

There is always a large stock of the best English and Welsh coals on the premises, which are supplied to steamers at the lowest market price, and vessels going alongside to take in or discharge coals pay no wharfage.

Vessels discharging cargo pay a wharfage of 20 cents per ton—a trifling charge when the immense advantages gained are taken into consideration.

Arrangements have been made by which all repairs to ships or steamers can be done with despatch while the vessels are lying alongside the wharves.

There is an efficient European pilot on the premises, and when required, a steam tug is always available.

The Daily Press

HONGKONG, JULY 11TH, 1868.

PERHAPS more poems, both in prose and verse, have been written about partings than about any other one incident of life. There are few people happy enough never to be troubled by any parting but that of their back hair. The songs of our language also, teem with farewells and adieux. Some people are perpetually in sorrow about leaving Annie, and for all degrees of restlessness, there are fitting phrases of regret ready-made. From Childe Harold bidding adieu! to his native shore, while the interesting landscape "fades o'er the waters blue" down to the street boy, who jovially bids good bye to his own Mary-Ann, all varieties of mankind will find that the poets have been providing forms of expression which may suitably depict their emotions at a farewell scene. The most exceptional circumstances have been foreseen, and we have a Peri, "beneath the dark sea" taking a sub-aqueous farewell of Araby's daughter, and a gallant, but unfortunate young man, with whom some of our warmest sympathies are bound up, bidding Addio! to Leonora, Addio! from the inside of a practicable tower, not to mention Donna Inez' reprobate son, whose infinitely various adventures furnish the student of his career with an unlimited assortment of parting experiences. Still the conditions of human life are more various than the combinations on a chess-board. There are no two leaves in all the wealth of foliage throughout the world, precisely alike, and no two partings are exactly the same.

When a journalist has to say good-bye to the public he has been addressing for any length of time, the great difficulty for him, we should say, would always be that of selecting for expression from the flood of thoughts which suggest themselves, some few which will not seem too serious for the occasion, nor too unfeeling, neither too regretful, nor too much the reverse. Suppose that a journalist were leaving Hongkong after talking uninterruptedly to the inhabitants of this colony for two or three years. In the first place it would be the single individual who would be going away, and not the paper. Il n'y a qu'un Français de plus, said the French King on his return. Il n'y a qu'un baptême de moins, is the evident consideration in the other case, which reduces the subject to a low level of importance, but at the same time it remains one which an audience in a kindly frame of mind will readily attend to for a moment. In this supposition as case then, the writer would remember all the objects for which he had striven, those which he had gained, those others which he had missed, the pleasant and the disagreeable incidents of his career, the enmity which here and there he had unwittingly excited, the approval, (a plant of much slower growth, and more delicate organisation), which he might hope that in other directions he had gradually won. He could not but be a little embarrassed in choosing how much of all this to notice once more, and how much to let alone, in order that the public in reading his last words, might do justice at all events to the efforts he had made, and the motives by which he had been animated. The purity of these at any rate he might be conscious of, and anxious to vindicate as well as he could, however, fully alive to the fact that the formation of any estimate about other matters must be left to other judgments than his own. But he would no sooner begin to allude even in the most shadowy manner to the past excitements with which he may have been concerned, than he would feel how nay reference to them must bring him once more into the arena of conflicting opinions, where, at that last moment, as he would be leaving it, he would hardly care to strike any more blows merely in his own interest. He would do better to address himself simply to the task of saying good-bye, and to that section of his readers, in proportion to the others, he would trust as a hundred to half a dozen, by which the sincerity of his efforts in urging reforms which seemed to him needed, in defending measures which seemed to him good, irrespective of all other considerations, might have been recognised, and appreciated in a friendly spirit.

To those, then, as the case is not only a supposititious, but a real one as well, the present writer takes leave to say, farewell, having done his best, however little that may have been, to promote the prosperity of the colony, and having worked, at all events, to that end, in any way that appeared open to him, as a loyal colonist of Hongkong for this time being. We are none of us here for ever, but if every man during his stay in the place would do his best for it, and take interest in it, without dwelling too much on the thought that at a certain time he is going away, after which "nothing will signify," its importance in the world could not but be immeasurably enhanced, and in the influence of those grander and more elevated purposes which would thus be pursued by the community, there would be found a remedy for almost any little social ailments with which colony might from time to time be afflicted. "Love thou thy land," is TENNYSON'S injunction. We do not say that it would sound so well converted into "Love thou thine island," still, however much their warmer feelings of patriotism may be observed by Hongkong residents for use at home, they may do their duty to their island conscientiously, and if they do, we are much mistaken unless they will find some sort of regard for it springing up at the last.

Private letters received per Arratoon Apcar give the following intelligence about the clippers passing Anjer:—

June 22. Taeping.
" Sir Lancelot.
Ariel.
" Belted Will.

The Taeping was leading the fleet that passed on the 22nd. The Ichiko would seem to have been a mile in front of the Belted Will, which was the first to get away, but third place. But this does not signify a great deal in such a match at the start. The Belted Will is from Macao, and therefore had a long advantage over the others.

Police Intelligence, 10th July.

BEFORE G. MAY ESQ.

USING ABUSIVE LANGUAGE.

Two chair-coolies were charged by Captain Martin, of the barque Sunning, with using abusive language to him.

Captain Martin said he hired the prisoners' chair at ten minutes to two, and kept it for two hours. He paid fifty cents, and these sometimes, but the fellows were not satisfied, but followed him and used dreadful bad language.

Mr. May: Well, what was the bad language used?

Captain Martin would rather not say, it was too bad to repeat.

On being pressed the captain was understood to say that the prisoners attributed his parentage to a female of the canine species.

The prisoners denied the charge, and said that the captain engaged them at ten o'clock.

Captain Martin said they must certainly did use the language to him, and in the very best English too.

Mr. May: Well, you see, if you do not tell me the exact words, I cannot tell what they have done.

Captain Martin: Well, sir, I don't say the words, I have been forty years in Her Majesty's service, but I am not going to use such words. I will write them for your Worship, if you wish.

Mr. May agreed to this, as it seemed the only way to come at the story. The captain accordingly took out his spectacles, and very gravely wrote on a piece of paper what appeared to be a great deal of abuse, considering the time he took to write it.

Mr. May on taking the piece of paper studied it for some time, and then informed the prisoners of the full extent of the captain's charge.

Inspector Kirby said that when the Captain came to the station to enter the charge, he was under the influence of drink.

Mr. May told Captain Martin that the words which had been written on the paper were such as he had never heard admitted to a Chinaman before. He could hardly believe that a Chinaman could speak the words in English. The captain, too, was not quite sober when he preferred the charge. Under all the circumstances he thought he must discharge the prisoners.

Captain Martin: Is there any thing more wanted with me?

Mr. May: No, nothing more.

Captain Martin: I beg your Worship's pardon, if I thrash them coolies I suppose it's assault and battery, isn't it?

Mr. May: I am not here to advise you what to do outside the court, but I should advise you not to commit any breach of the peace.

Captain Martin having intimated that the first defendant was a "piratical son of a tinker," then left the court, with what seemed to be a determination to annihilate the two coolies if he could catch them.

A DISGRACEFUL CASE.

William Parcell and Thomas Marsh, two seamen of H.M.S. Princess Charlotte, Samuel B. Ellicott, of H.M.S. Pearl, Frederick Martin, and George Polk, dockyard policemen, were charged with attempting to rescue William Parcell from the custody of Sergeant Haley.

A Chinese sailing-boat keeper said the two men-of-war's men came to his eating-house in the Queen's-road, at eight o'clock last night, and each had a twenty-five cent. tiffin. After they had eaten the aforesaid tiffin, they mildly intimated that they were not going to pay. They walked out, and only paid forty cents after the sergeant of Police came up. He saw the man Parcell strike the sergeant.

Sergeant Haley was in the Queen's-road last evening, when he was called by the eating-house keeper. He heard what was the matter, and proceeded to the house on the trouble-some errand by advising the tars to pay for their "feed." Interference on the part of the "bobbies" is always a sore point with Jack, and so it was in this case, for the second prisoner, Marsh, commenced by "plugging" (as it was expressed) the sergeant in the eye. The two first offenders were then taken into custody, and of course came up to the station in anything but a lamb like manner. On the road up, Ellicott, and the two dockyard policemen, met Sergeant Haley P. C. 159, (Indian), and his prisoners. Here the sergeant swears that an attempt to rescue the prisoners was made. All the defendants positively denied having touched the sergeant, and they all questioned him on different points of the evidence, especially to that portion in which it was stated in full, the bad language used by both parties.

P. C. 159 (Indian), said he was called by Sergeant Haley to assist in taking the first two defendants to the station. He took one of them, and came up with the sergeant to the station. On the way up the three last defendants, Ellicott, and the two dockyard policemen, attempted to take the men-of-war's men from custody.

Defendants all made different defences, the first two said they paid their "shot," like men, and were gratuitously presented with a cigar by the eating-house keeper. The other three indignantly denied to whole charge, and said that sergeant Haley was intoxicated, and that it was he who used the bad language.

Mr. May said it was very evident the first two defendants had done as stated by the police, and it was also sure that the other three had not behaved properly to the police. Parcell must pay $5, Marsh $1, Ellicott $1, and the two Dockyard policemen $3 each.

THE LATE CASSOW ATTACKED HAZELL-JUSTICE IN THE GAOL.

Frederick William Gulliford, late boad tarnkay of Victoria Gaol, was brought up on a warrant charging him with having assaulted one Abdul Kahn, deceased.

Mr. Haseland, the crown solicitor, appeared to prosecute. The prisoner was undefended.

Mr. Haseland in addressing His Worship said that the prisoner had been indicted at the Supreme Court, in conjunction with two other turnkeys, for manslaughter, but the Attorney-had entered a nolle prosequi in his case, and he had accordingly been released. The prisoner was in the present case charged with an assault. But before going into the question, he would call the attention of the bench to an Act of Parliament bearing upon the case. In 7th Will. IV. and 1st Victoria, Chap 85, sec. 11, it is laid down that in a charge of manslaughter power is given to the jury to find the prisoner or prisoners guilty on the minor charge of assault. That is the nature count of assault is included in the charge of manslaughter. His colleague, H. of that Act has been repealed in England by 24 and 25 Victoria, Chap. 101, but the Act of repeal did not extend to this colony. If the present case was in England, the prisoner having been discharged on a charge of manslaughter, might legally be again brought up and punished for assault. He therefore wished to know His Worship's opinion as to whether he considered that by the law as at present in force here, the minor count of assault was included in a charge of manslaughter; and therefore as the prisoner Gulliford had been jeopardised once, he wished to know whether he (prisoner) had been indicted on the whole charge which could be brought under the unrepealed Sec. 11 of the Act of Parliament first referred to, and would plead autrefois acquit.

Mr. May decided that no Sec. 11 of Chap. 85 of 7th William, and 1st Victoria had not been repealed as far as regards this colony he must discharge the prisoner. It was evident that the prisoner had been jeopardised once on the whole charge, for it must be assumed that the Attorney-General was aware of the fact. And as that law is at present in force, here he was prosecuting upon the whole charge.

Court of Summary Jurisdiction, July 10.

BEFORE JUDGE H. J. BALL.

Leong-asang & Patrick Hickey.—This was an action to recover the sum of $5, for two suits of white shirting supplied defendant. Plaintiff said he received about $50 on the bill and had been $3.70, but that he had received one payment of 70 cents, leaving the above balance due.

Defendant, who belonged to the 73rd Regiment, claimed that he had paid the whole amount. The plaintiff had complained to the Adjutant of the Regiment, and the unfortunate Hickey up before that official, and an investigation was made, but Hickey came out of this trial triumphant, and the discomfitted tailor had accordingly to availed himself of this court.

Defendant called Corporal Turner, who saw Hickey on a certain occasion hand plaintiff a five-dollar bill, and saw plaintiff give back some change.

His Honor said the plaintiff must be nonsuited, as this court had no authority to hear any case against one in Her Majesty's service for a less sum than $20.

Dreyer v. Shin-sing.—This was an action to recover $96.35, the value of eleven revolvers. It appeared that the defendant was pressed and cut-purdore to plaintiffs, having left their employ in April last. ince that, a case of revolvers was sold by plaintiffs, which on being opened was found to contain only fourteen revolvers, whereas it should have contained twenty-five. This case had been received by the defendant, and in the general book had been entered by him as containing fourteen.

His Honor said that this appeared to be more a case of stealing. The plaintiffs represented that the action was for goods sold. How could these goods have been sold, to plaintiff if he had taken them? Furthermore Mr. Budde, who appeared on behalf of plaintiffs, could not depose to the goods having been originally delivered to defendant, and consequently there was a lack of evidence. The plaintiff must be non-suited.

Hing-a-yee v. H. A. Vascher.—This was an action to recover $153.25 for goods supplied. Defendant objected to the bill on the ground that some of the articles were enormously overcharged. The plaintiff had offered to take $160 in settlement of the account, but defendant did not consider them worth over $85.

Plaintiff said he had offered at one time to take $100 in settlement of the account, but now he had been put to the trouble of coming to court he wanted the full amount of his claim.

His Honor said that since plaintiff had at one time been willing to accept $100, he thought that would be a very fair settlement of the case now. There was only $15 in dispute, and the case might compose the greater part of the day if heard. He thought if all parties came to this agreement it would be a much more satisfactory way of disposing of the case. This view of the case seemed to please both parties, and it was accordingly disposed of by the payment by defendant of the—$100.

Chim-achun v. Capt. Aitken.—The defendant in this case was formerly chief cook on the steamer Shaftesbury, of which defendant is master. The present suit was brought to recover the sum of $67.51 for wages.

It appears that the plaintiff shipped in the steamer for a voyage from here to Singapore, Bombay, or some other port in the Indian Ocean for a period not less than six months. He left here in March last and went to Bombay, and while there the captain beat him and turned him on shore. After having been on shore two weeks, the captain then sent for him to come back, and he now sought to recover his wages.

The defence told a very different story. Plaintiff left the ship at Bombay of his own accord, and after having been away from the ship for a month and four days was taken back by the solicitation of some of his friends, who were on board. Defendant admitted an indebtedness of $31, which sum had been paid into court, but he did not wish to pay plaintiff for the time he had absented himself from the ship, which he claimed, and now sought to recover.

His Honor said the case evidently turned on the time plaintiff had been on shore at Bombay, for he should hold that plaintiff had no right to leave the ship. After hearing evidence on both sides, he came to the conclusion that plaintiff had absented himself from the ship one month and four days without authority, and therefore was only entitled to the amount defendant had admitted and paid into court. Judgment was accordingly given for $31 in favor of the plaintiff.

Tye-a-fat v. Shew-fong-lun.—An action to recover $120 on a promissory note. Defendant did not appear, and judgment was accordingly entered for plaintiff.

L. M. Lobo v. L. Rozario.—This was a suit for $25. Defendant, when called, did not show up, and plaintiff therefore got judgment.

His Honor remarked during the morning that hereafter, if at half past ten any plaintiff came forward, and stated that he had reason to believe that the defendant in the action was not present, he would immediately hear and decide the case. It was not right or fair that parties should be kept waiting in court and lose the whole morning, when their claims were not disputed. Defendants absented themselves at their own peril, and in future this rule would be strictly adhered to.

Plungers.

(From the "London Review.")

The present rate and system of living is not confined altogether to the sort of expenses that can be entered in a book. The fast that society has become luxurious entails a corresponding use of accidental resources of pleasure which may be compared to the agonists of musical objects now necessary for fashionable enjoyment. The term which we have borrowed from the "Ring," and placed at the head of this article, expresses more than a dry one; beat and cuts in debt. We meet with social plungers every day. The plungers may be male or female, married or single. The diplomat is gained by the simple process of dipping into forbidden regions of delight without taking a pass from Mrs. Grundy. There was a time when, if this was done, society at once came down upon the offender. Women gave the cold shoulder to sisters who were suspected of anything of the kind. The word "plunger" may now be heard in the best circles applied to young ladies who were formerly flirts. Of course, like every new form, it wants definiteness. Young gentlemen who have got hold of it use it as they do any other additional phrase which lads pick their fancy up, and supplies them with one more idea. A girl who waltzes with great swiftness is a plunger, so is an actress who is bold and showy in parlegues. Still it is evident that no emphasis is used, cannot long be permitted to be used only by our golden youths. It must serve more distinctive purposes than those to which they have hitherto been enough to apply it. We can see many quarters in which it could be serviceable. There are in literature many writers who may well be called "plungers." The authoresses, for instance, who are constantly thrilling and fainting with passion, and pulling their heroes and heroines over head and ears in love are plungers. They make daring descents into quarters hitherto regarded as inclosure by people who believed in propriety. Poets who are favoured with visions of a character more pagan than correct, and whose works render critics virtuous, are notoriously plungers. But it is not a mere defiance of modesty which qualifies a man or a woman for the title. Mr. Whalley is a plunger in his own way. He is haunted with a dread of Jesuits, and his exceeding fear prevents him from feeling the least shame at being thought a fool. So the splashes and flounders until his eccentricities duly fit him for the name we refer to. Ireland has her political plungers in Colonel Knox and in Mr. Reardon. The latter is the fine type of the class, and has managed on several occasions during the session to ask questions which show that he has already dived below the regions of common sense.

What constitutes genius is after all but an exaltation of mind, not at all dissimilar in kind, though it is in degree, to the enthusiasm of sentiment which makes the plunger. Ordinary people who follow steady callings, who do common-sensical work of the day, never plunge; but with your financial genius the case is different. He plunges often enough, taking down plenty of money to steady his course, and if he fails to bring pearls for those who trust him, he never fails to produce the oyster shells. The successful financial plunger is the idol of the times. From him proceed those gigantic schemes for railways, monetary companies, and other speculations which make fortunes of hundreds. On the Stock Exchange plunging transactions are common enough. Even art is not free from these erratic performances. The age demands sensation. "Heads" lead the way for plungers. In pictures we believe the practice is in its infancy, the general aspect of the Academy, for instance, this year, not being in the least suggestive of force or vehemence of any kind. There is one paper in which plunging looms large, he need never day. They are popular enough, these quaint literary creatures, with a certain set of people, who accept them for considerably more than they are worth.

There are numbers of men and women with almost unconquerable tendencies towards vagabondism. Too will find such people constantly in social purlieus, and now and then encamped in a cloud of scandal. Mr. Lever, in his recent novels, is particularly successful in depicting them. They are to be found at all foreign bathing-places—at Nice, at Montreux, at Florence, at Baden, at Homburg. Some of these plungers have gone down so far that they are never able to lift again their heads above water. Society does not altogether forgive a man for running away with his neighbour's wife, or for having, bullied notoriously in his house, and being sold up. A plunger of this kind requires time to elapse before resuscitation sets in. Yet during that period the plungers' male and female lead no unhappy life. They belong to a race naturally as careless as butterflies. There is no greater mistake, with all due respect for the copy-books, than to suppose that that curious complaint known as the anguish of a guilty conscience pursues those who sin against the moral laws or the laws of the country. The plunger leaves his conscience on the brink of the stream before he goes in. And it is quite possible to conceive that he may have none to leave.

The plunger can lay claim to that bold quality recognised as "dash," which so often carries the possessor through difficulties which would utterly overwhelm weaker or more scrupulous persons. But besides that, he or she must be in the extreme cases entirely unembarrassed by domestic ties or feelings. The leap once taken, the plunger must not look round. And from all one can discern, this class of people is not much unhappy. You will find a thoroughly virtuous, faithful father, husband, and taxpayer with gloom on his countenance and troubles scored on his forehead, while your plunger is taking his ease at some one's expense without a thought or a care for the morrow. He has splashes and flounders until his eccentricities duly fit him for the name we refer to. Ireland has her political plungers in Colonel Knox and in Mr. Reardon. The latter is the fine type of the class, and has managed on several occasions during the session to ask questions which show that he has already dived below the regions of common sense.

The plunger can lay claim to that bold quality recognised as "dash", to remembrance? It is also doubtful if the portrait of Dr. Dodd should have been purchased by the trustees. He was an eloquent preacher and a skilful forger; his death on the scaffold made him notorious. There might be inconvenience in laying down a rule that all clergymen who have been executed because they were criminals should look forward to having their portraits placed in our National Gallery. Whether innocent of guilty, Princess Caroline certainly made herself conspicuous enough to be a national personage. Those who know her by report only will not be favourably impressed when they behold her likeness. Other important acquisitions are the portraits of Samuel Butler and Baletrade Waitelope. Altogether, the progress of the Gallery is creditable, if slow. It will be more generally visited when the pictures are hung in suitable rooms. A few years hence our National Portrait Gallery will be the most instructive of our public exhibitions as well as the favourite haunt for sight-seers. —Globe.

TEA DESTROYS FRANCE.—We see from the Paris journals and Galignani that the "Licensed Victuallers' Tea Association," finding it its combat with the grocers at home, has extended itself to France, and founded an office in Paris, and is endeavouring to persuade the French to drink tea. It is curious that hitherto the only continental people who drink tea quite as regularly as the English should be the Dutch. Is this a result of their somewhat similar history in the Eastern seas, which has brought them more into connection with the tea-producing parts of the world? Or, does the French preference for coffee rest on reasons of a physiological character? It will be a remarkable effect of legislation on national habits if Mr. Gladstone's policy should have for its results to make the two countries exchange not liquors but tastes—one converting the other to a stimulant more harmless in such case than the stimulant at present in use.

RHETORIC.—The Paris correspondent of the Guardian says that it is impossible to read the speech of M. Thiers, or of M. Kolb-Bernard and M. Pouyer-Quertier, both of them practical manufacturers, or to peruse consecutively at the same time the debates in the French and English Chambers, without being struck by the great superiority of the former in point of language and power of expression." He finds a simple explanation of this contrast in the difference of training in the schools of the two countries, and in the pains taken in France to teach the French youth the right use of their own language—a discreet observance almost totally neglected in England. "If," he says, "you go into a French normal school, for example, when the fifth form, or 'classe de rhétorique,' as it is called, is with its professor, what do you find? You hear a number of young men reading alternately passages from the French theses they have composed on a given subject. Not mere assertions or criticism, perhaps, in bestowed on the subject-matter, which each pupil is left to make as good as he can. But the diction and expression—of that not a word is allowed to escape without being most severely overhauled. At every instant you hear from the Professor the remark, 'That is not French; for,' &c. No, that is not well expressed; this is the phrase you should have used to convey the idea you wish to enunciate." Might we not profit by this example? No doubt we might; but shall we?

A MOVING ORATOR.—The lively and good-humoured baronet and fox-and-all-law who represents the county of Clare in Parliament may be called, in bardic language, "Colman of the Hundred Motions." In our eyes he is essentially the most moving orator in the House of Commons. When one talks of Coleridge's motion, or Ewart's motion, or Berkeley's motion, we know where we are. These gentlemen, if not altogether men of one idea, are content to give their whole mind to one thing at a time, and think that one subject in a session is as much as a private member can reasonably be expected to undertake. But when we hear of O'Leghlen's motion we are as much perplexed as the members of the Stock Exchange were by Baron Rothschild's joke about "Smith's failure." The hon. baronet (superior to Edmund Burke in this) is not content to give up to party what was meant for mankind. He is always ready to legislate upon any subject, to make a motion about anything or anybody. This is a propensity useful in its way, but liable also to run into abuse. Somehow or other, however, the House has not yet voted Sir Colman a bore, they like a man who is always pleasant and inoffensive; and, though he seldom succeeds in carrying any of his motions, he is allowed to make as many as he likes.—London Review.

SELF-LUBRICATING STEAM-ENGINE PACKING,

Just imported by them, ex Maiden Queen.

It will not gum nor char; is easy on the rods; keeps them clean and polished; reduces friction; is easily fixed; saves loss of time, and waste of material; and, being SELF-LUBRICATING, requires the use of NO GREASE.

The importance of increased durability cannot be over-estimated, while its cheapness combined with the abovementioned qualities, effects a saving to the consumer of from 100 to 300 per cent.
